Lorraine Nadel

Lorraine Nadel, founding partner of Nadel & Ciarlo, P.C., is a skilled and accomplished real estate and commercial litigator known for her ability to effectively solve problems and provide concrete, practical solutions to complex matters. With a combined legal expertise and accounting background, she is considered by colleagues to be the one with the “real answers to legal questions” and is sought out by property owners, attorneys, businesses, brokers, management companies, boards, and clients alike.

Her practice encompasses a diverse range of litigation-oriented real estate, and commercial matters. Recent cases have involved new construction, title and ownership disputes, developer and contractor defects and defaults, condo and co-op board litigation, common charge and maintenance defaults, contract, and down-payment litigation.

Ms. Nadel is often quoted for her real estate expertise by The New York Times and other publications. She is a well-regarded speaker on real estate litigation and is frequently called upon to handle more complex real estate, commercial, and residential matters.
